A Wise Man.

There was an old geezer and he had a lot of sense; he started up a business on one dollar and eighty cents. The dollar for stock and the eighty cents for an advertisement brought him three lovely dollars in a day, by dad!

Well, he bought more goods and a little more space. And he played that system with a smile on his face. The customers flocked to his two-by-four, and soon he had to hustle for a regular store. Up on the square, where the people pass, he gobbled up a corner that was all plate glass. He fixed up the windows with the best that he had, and he told 'em about it in a half page ad. He soon had 'em coming and he never, never quit, and he wouldn't cut down on his ads one single jilt.

Well, he's kept things bumping in the town ever since and everybody's calling him the Merchant Prince. Some say its luck, but that's all bunk; why, he was doing business when the time were punk. People have to purchase, and this geezer was wise, for he knew the way to get 'em was to advertise.—Troy Chief.

JUST LIKE "PAW."

It was in a Missouri town about ten miles from a railroad. A customer of mine had frequently asked me to accompany him home and stay all night. This night I had no good excuse for refusing, and so accepted his invitation.

My customer was the big man of the town, village blacksmith, president of the village council, justice of the peace and a licensed Methodist preacher.

He had a family composed of eight girls, ranging in age from 18 to 30.

After a heavy supper, we sat in the parlor. The old man monopolized the conversation, regaling me with the history of his various activities during the past year. Told me the number of horses he had shod, the couples he had married, the different lawsuits he had tried, and other commonplace local items until I was ready to die, I was so sleepy.

At last he arose, turned around and got down on his knees at his chair. Thinking we were about to have family prayers, I followed suit. I saw that we were the only ones to kneel, but I waited for the old man to begin his prayers, but he failed to call on me, so I thought it was to be a silent prayer.

Finally the old man got up unceremoniously, yawned loudly, and remarked:

"Well, friend Felix, I guess I will go to bed. When you get ready, one of the girls will show you to your room."

A little later one of the girls took a candle and led the way to the stairway. As I passed through the door, I heard another of the girls titter and say to another:

"He warms his back just like paw does before he goes to bed."—Felix Cashman in the Sample Case.

When you yawn a good deal in the day time, feel dull, achey and want to stretch frequently, it is an unmistakable symptom of malaria, and unless you do something at once you are booked for a spell of chills. Herbine is a chill medicine that will prevent or cure the disease. It drives out the impurities on which the malarial germ thrives, strengthens the liver and cleanses the bowels. Price 50c. Sold by all druggists.

A communication from Mount Carmel came to The Chronicle this week unsigned, and as a result the capacious maw of the waste basket received it. We are glad to receive the news from every part of the county each week, but be sure and sign your name, please.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

TEACHERS MEETING.

In response to the call of the county superintendent, Edgar J. Clement, the members of the Benton County Teachers' Association will assemble in Camden August 21. Superintendent Clement has arranged the following program for the occasion:

Devotional exercises by Rev. Frank B. Jones.

The importance of winter cover crops, J. Sidney Cantwell.

Seed corn selection, Edgar J. Clement.

Subsoil plowing, A. K. Presson.

Dental sanitation and its relation to health, Dr. Dougherty.

Report of committee on school fair.

The greater part of the meeting will be devoted to the discussion of agricultural subjects. This is introductory, as explained by Mr. Clement, to a series of agricultural lessons to be offered the teachers of the county through the teacher's meetings. Ninety per cent of the pupils of the rural schools will make agriculture their life work, and as many will depend solely for their training on the rural school. It is therefore imperative that they receive some special instruction along the line of their work.

The County Superintendent has secured a supply of outlined lessons prepared especially for and admirably suited to the needs of the rural schools. These will be placed in the hands of teachers at the meeting at the high school building here tomorrow.

When the baby is suffering the double affliction of hot weather and bowel disorders, the remedy needed is McGee's Baby Elixir. It reduces the feverish condition, corrects the stomach and checks looseness of the bowels. Price 25c and 50c per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

"Man wants but little here below," but he's never satisfied with what he gets.

The Bethlehem Steel Company begins August with a general increase of its employes' wages. This, too, just as we are hearing that the new tariff is "ruining the country." Probably the new tariff eased the war and the bad crops last year.

The war cloud has a golden lining—for the ammunition makers. Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Ditto for the farmer with a surplus food and feed crop.
